

Abstract

A search engine that organizes the search results into clusters of files having logical relationship. Clusters are determined according to select phrases found in the files hosted on servers in a computer network. The select phrases are determined by the search engine or the user or a combination of the two. The clusters assist the user in tailoring its search for files.